DESIGN APPROACH

My process starts with a question, not a fixed style. I collect references, identify the strongest visual tension, test type and colour, and then build a system that can grow across formats.

WHAT I MAKE

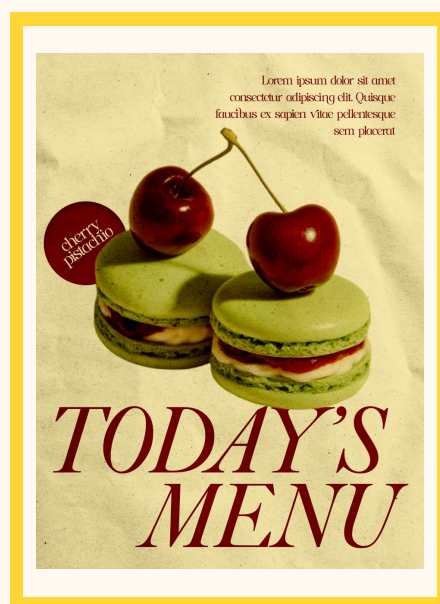

- Event, movie and awareness posters
- Album covers and music artwork
- Social media campaigns
- Packaging, labels, boxes and bags
- Websites and landing pages
- Loyalty cards and infographics
- Typography-led posters

CLAUDE MAGAZINE

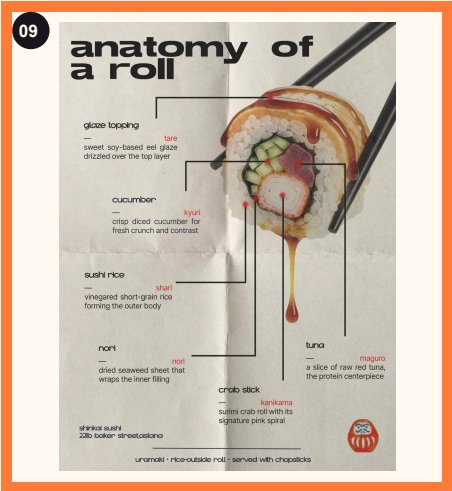

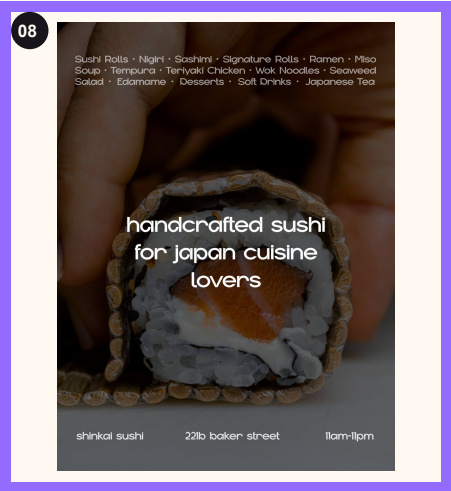

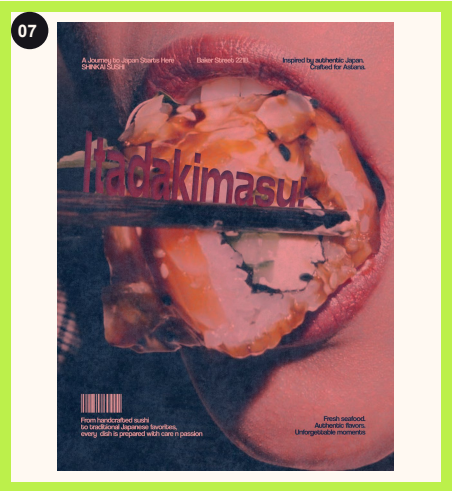

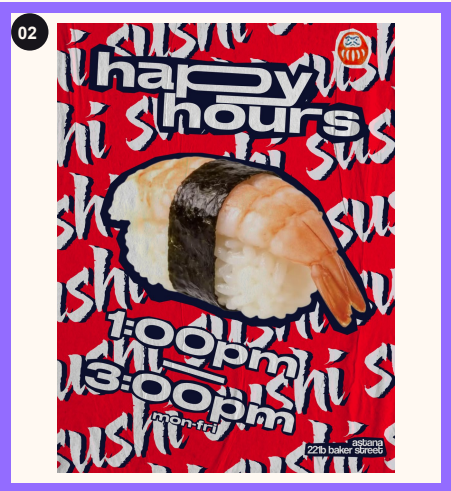

EDITORIAL SERIES

Sushi Social Club

Social media series / 9 posts

A concept social media identity for an imaginary sushi club, designed to feel more like an underground fashion editorial than a conventional restaurant menu.

Deep red, close food crops, dark surfaces and condensed type create a tactile system with enough repetition to connect all nine posts.

Macaroon Club

Campaign series / 9 posts

A playful campaign that turns macarons into the heroes of a nostalgic editorial world while keeping the pace of a modern social feed.

Pistachio green, cherry red, warm paper texture and oversized serif type move the series between sweet, strange and dramatic.

Macarons are delicate French sandwich cookies made from almond flour, egg whites, and sugar. Filled with buttercream, ganache, or jam. They have a shiny shell on the outside and a soft, chewy center inside, often in bright colors and many flavors.

Claude Magazine

Editorial series / 8 posts

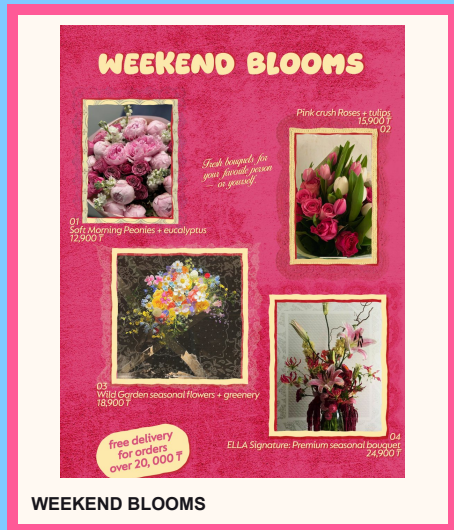

An editorial experiment that explores how an AI topic can feel human and curious instead of resembling conventional technology advertising.

Cream, coral and blue combine with imperfect texture, conversational questions and flexible frames to make a complex topic approachable.

One idea. One poster.

Independent visual experiments across culture, events, food and typography. Each poster keeps its own format and character.
